

Console Jockey, Inc.

Dear Employee,

This letter is to inform you that, due to business necessity, Console Jockey, Inc. is conducting a reduction in force and regrettably, your employment has been terminated effective immediately.

You will be paid through today. Per Console Jockey's severance policy, your final paycheck will include thirty seconds of pay in lieu of notice. Your current health benefits will end today. We really hope you don't break your leg because COBRA costs more than most unemployed people can afford.

We would like to remind you to review your non-compete agreement which prohibits you from working for anyone. Remember, all companies are competing for money which makes every one of them our competitor. Also, don't even think about applying for unemployment or we'll have to tell you-know-who about you-know-what.

Sincerely,

Faceless Evil